WASHINGTON, March 23 (NYI) -- President Nixon said last night that the South Vietnamese operation in Laos has made considerable progress" thus far toward the goals of insuring U.S. withdrawals from Vietnam, reducing the threat to the American forces still there and developing the capability of the Sal-gon army to defend itself.

But Mr. Nixon cautioned that it might not be possible to judge the six-week-old incursion against the Communist supply lines as

Pentagon Defends Tear Gas, Plant Killers as Legitimate

By John W. Finney

WASHINGTON, March 23 fects and that their use fulfilled (NYT).—The Defense Department argued yesterday that tear gases and plant killers are legitimate, humane weapons of war that should not be abandoned by the United States.

For example, G. Warren Nutter, assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the use of tear gases to flush enemy troops out of bunkers in South Vietnam caused "less suffering" than burning them to death with napalm. Mr. Nutter appeared before the committee to urge Senate ratifica-tion of the 1925 Geneva protocol banning chemical and biological warfare. The administration has proposed ratification with the informal interpretation that the treaty would not prevent the United States from continuing to use tear gases and plant killers.

Mr. Nutter's line of reasoningpreviously used by Secretary of State William P. Rogers before the committee—failed to impress Sen. J. William Fulbright, D., Ark., the committee chairman.

McNamara on Napalm Sen. Fulbright said that such a justification of the use of tear gases for lethal purposes remind-ed him of the argument that the former secretary of defense, Robert S. McNamara, used before the committee several years ago. Mr. McNamara said that it was "humane" for the United States to use napalm but that it was "very barbaric" for the Viet Cong to cut off heads.

Mr. Nutter declined to appear before the committee last week because of a luncheon date. He made clear that he was not speaking for the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Noting that there were complaints from State Department officials that the committee was holding "unbalanced" hearings on the treaty, Sen. Fulbright observed in an opening statement that the joint chiefs had been invited to testify but had declined to addear. In defending the administra-tion's interpretation of the treaty -which runs counter to a resolution adopted, 80 to 3, by the UN General Assembly in 1969-Mr. Nutter contended that tear gases were different from other lethal and nonlethal gases in their ef-(UPI: -Argentina's military junta took over complete control of the country today after deposing President Roberto M. Levingston in a bloodless coup.

First act of the three-man junta was to reinstate Brig. Gen. Exequiel Martinez to the post of head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. the post from which he was fired by Gen. Levingston last Friday in a move that precipitated last night's crisis.

Gen. Levingston, 51. stepped down shortly after midnight after trying to fire Lt. Gen. Alejandro Lanusse, 52-year-old army chief of staff and chairman of the junta.

A communiqué from army headquarters said: "The com-manders in chief of the armed forces have decided to fire Gen. Levingston in his functions as president of the republic. We have decided to assume political power in the nation until we

UEMOS AIRES (March 23 fulfill the process of the Argentine revolution."

The three men involved were Gen. Lanusse, Navy Adm. Pedro Gnavi and Air Force Brig. Gen. Carlos Alberto Rey. The grayhaired Gen. Lanusse was considered the real power behind the presidency.

Gen. Levingston was hardly known before he was picked by the junta to rule the country. He was formally sworn in as president on June 18, with Gen. Lanusse, Adm. Gnavi and Gen. Rey standing behind him.

Cordoba Rioting Ten days ago serious rioting broke out in the industrial city of Cordoba, 430 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, as a result of labor strikes. Gen. Lanusse re-portedly was against sending government troops to quell the uprising in which two persons were killed.

Gen. Levingston had said he was firing Gen. Lanusse because be did not propose adequate measures to control the violence in the city of Cordoba, which caused 1.3 billion pesos [$3.25 million] in damage.

When government troops finally moved in last Thursday, all violence in the city subsided. Today's move came after more than a week of rumors indicating that Gen. Lanusse was about to overthrow Gen. Levingston. The coup, Gen. Lanusse said today, responds to the "objectives of the Argentine revolution, especially the exercise of political control which will permit an opening toward efficient and stable representative democracy." ### '6' Ministers Fail to Reach Price Accord

By Richard Norton-Taylor BRUSSELS, March 23 (WP).—About 80,000 farmers from the European Common marched through Brussels today in a demonstra-tion for higher prices which, according to Associated Press, left one dead and 75 injured, including 16 policemen. Police took 68 persons into custody. Unconfirmed reports said a total of 160 people had been injured, including 31 policemen, the AP reported.

The massive show of solidarity was the culmination of a series of national protests designed to build up pressure against Com-mon Market governments before the new farm season begins

April 1. Elsewhere in the Belgian capital, agricultural ministers of the six EEC nations were meeting all day in an attempt to reach an agreement which would satisfy the farmers without leading to a sharp rise in the joint farm subsidies bill. While a final agree-ment had not emerged by late evening, it was bound to include some price hikes.

Increases in the Common Mar-ket's farm prices will not be popular with either the United States or Britain. Domestic prices are reflected in the Common Market's import levies, and the United States, concerned about its own farm exports, has already complained about the inevitable

March 23 (WP).—Secretary-General II Thant has called for redonbled world efforts to dislocate South Africa's economic structure as a means of combating apar-

Mr. Thant's unusually strong statement came at a special meeting yesterday of the General Assembly's Apartheid Committee commemorating the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. He termed the policies and actions of the South African government "a grave danger to the cause of peace and security on the African continent."

This language was close to that in Chapter VII of the UN Charter governing the use of sanctions or force to deal with threats to the peace. It went beyond anything the Security Council has been willing to say so far in resolutions dealing with South Africa.

Mr. Thant said he still hopes the South African government will adopt an alternative course. An essential first step, he said, would be the liberation of all persons imprisoned, interned or restricted for opposition to apartheid.

But, South Africa's actions, he said, have left the world community no choice but to appeal for "moral, political and material assistance" to victims of apartheid and to insure that "mounting pressures lead to South Africa's isolation and a serious dislocation of its economic struc-

Saigon Milestone

"We now have concluded-this is Gen. Abrams's assessmentthat the South Vietnamese have now passed a milestone in their development," he said.

Noting that, unlike in the Cambodian incursion last year, the South Vietnamese went into Laos without American troops or advisers, Mr. Nixon said that they did so "with only American air support against very, very heavy odds numerically on the ground." "They fought extremely well," he said. "Now they're withdrawing. They're having all the problems of an army withdrawing. Some of their units have not done so well, but 18 out of the 23 oattalions, as Gen. Abrams has pointed out, are doing extremely well and he says [they] will come out with greater confidence and greater morale than before."

He said that what this means in terms of the Vietnam war "is that South Vietnam, man for man when there is not a numerical superiority on the part of the enemy, will be able, to use that parochial term, to hack it, in my opinion—and in Gen. Abrams's opinion."

Mr. Nixon's conversation with Mr. Smith represented the latest stage of a public relations camof considerable variety aimed at giving the President's personality and views wider public exposure.

The White House press secretary, Ron Ziegler, said yesterday morning that the White House had originally suggested the idea of the interview to the network, although it left the network free to choose the interviewer. Mr. Ziegler also said that the two other major networks, the Columbia Broadcasting System and NBC, had been promised similar opportunities in the near future.

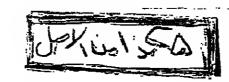

Mr. Nixon's recent spate of public and private interviews started shortly after his ratings in the public opinion polls began to drop to their lowest level in two years. Some observers here believe that his increased exposure has been designed largely to ent a more pleasing presidenpresent a more pleasing present at image to the public and improve his ratings in the polls.

On at least two occasions in these interviews, however—once during his session with Mr. Sulzberger-Mr. Nixon has said that he thinks there is little he can do to change his image. He has also said that he has no intention of adjusting his basic foreign and domestic policies in response to what the polls say.

Accordingly, most reporters who spend their time watching Mr. Nixon at work think that his primary objective in last night's performance, as well as the others, has been to seize upon a variety of settings in order to explain, in greater detail than he has before, the objectives of his policies and the assumptions behind them. Mr. Smith is the co-anchorman of the week-night "ABC Evening News with Howard K. Smith and Harry Ressoner."

Eve of Crucial Vote

ixon Issues Call to Senate To Continue Funds for SST

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, March 23 (WP).—The Senate headed for its showdown vote tomorrow on the controversial supersonic transport plane (SST), with opponents apparently clinging to a slight edge. On the eve of the vote, President Nixon issued an appeal— with "great emphasis and great determination"—for Senate approval of continued government funding of the plane's develop-

The President's thoughts, expressed at a two-hour hreakfast meeting with Republican congressional leaders, were relayed to reporters by Senate minority leader Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania.

"The President spoke," Sen. Scott said, "with great emphasis and great determination expressing strong bellef in the necessity for proceeding with this important and dramatic breakthrough.

Sen, Scott said Treasury Sec-retary John Connally also addressed the leaders and "said that, in his view, it would be unbelievable for the country to refuse to go ahead with a program that so strongly affects our balance of payments."

"Odds Against Approvai"

Sen, Scott said the vote "will be close, and we're doing our best to assure that we have enough." At a Capitol news conference, meanwhile, Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield, of Montana, said. The odds are against approval, but that's just a guess."

With the two absentees expected, Washington Post surveys indicate opponents of the plane are probably assured of 48 to 50 votes, while supporters of the SST have nailed down about 46. This count includes several senators on both sides who have sald that they can still change their minds. These, plus a few undecided senators, like Peter Dominick, R., Colo., and James Buckley, Cons.-

ministration-backed project. At issue is the question of whether Congress should provide another $134 million to continue funding of the plane until next June 30. The House has already voted to cut off the funds. Present funding expires March 30.

If the Senate also votes a cutoff, that could mean the end of the plane, unless some other way to finance it were found. But if the Senate votes the money, then the issue will go to a House-Senate conference, which will decide whether to provide the full $134 million, part of the sum, or

Congressmen Act to Seek PW Solution

By Richard Halloran WASHINGTON, March 23 (NYT).—A "National Week of Concern" for the prisoners of war and men missing ln action in Indochina began here yesterday amid growing congressional feeling that an alternative to President Nixon's policy on captured servicemen must be found. About 125 congressmen, including House speaker Carl Albert, D., Okla., attended a reception on Capitol Hill yesterday for the officers of the National League of Families, which claims to have 3,000 members who represent more than half the missing and captured servicemen. Todar, a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee opened two weeks of hearings on this emotional issue. Some 250 resolutions have heen introduced, ranging from demands to break off the Paris peace talks until the prisoners are released to a call for 'proportional repatriation." The proportional plan would call on the administration to negotiate a gradual release of American prisoners as U.S. forces in Vietnam are withdrawn.

The Department of Defense said that 462 men are believed to be held captive as of mid-March, an increase from 460 at the end of February. Another 1.182 servicemen are listed as missing, up from 1,145 at the end of last month.

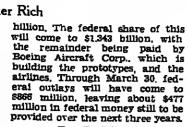

In December, Hanoi released a list of 338 airmen captured in North Vietnam. But the North Vietnamese have given no word on American prisoners taken in South Vietnam, Cambodia, or Laos.

The reception yesterday was arranged by Rep. John Anderson, R., Ill., chairman of the Republican conference, and Rep. Olin Teague, D., Texas, chairman of the Democratic caucus. President Nixon called last fall for an immediate and unconditional release of all prisoners on both sides. The North Vietnamesc have said they are ready to discuss the question if the United States will set a firm date for complete withdrawai of its forces from South Vietnam.

Under the arrangements hetween Boeing and the U.S. gov-ernment, the federal government will get back its entire $1,343 blllion outlay when 300 of the planes are sold, and will receive another $1 billion after another 200 planes are sold. The plane is designed for com-mercial use in 1978-1879, primarily nn the transatlantic and transpacific routes.

In another development, the White House accused television personality Dick Cavett of helping to defeat the SST bill in the House and "suggested" an administration spokesman appear on his television show hefore tomorrow's Senate vote.

The White House action came to light several hours before Mr. Cavett taped the requested interview with SST project manager William Magruder shown on the ABC network tonight.

Mr. Cavett, an ardent conservationist, also had scheduled Sen. William Proxmire, D., Wis, to present the opposing view but White House objected strenuously. Mr. Magruder filed a complaint with the Federal Communications Commission under the "fairness doctrine" and Sen. Proxmire decided he could not spare the time.

At the taping yesterday, Mr. Magruder told newsmen that Sen. Proximire, Sen. Birch Bayh, Ind., and entertainer Arthur Godfrey all had been on the show at different times and advocated defeat of the SST.

Interest of Fairness

Before Mr. Magruoer came on camera, Mr. Cavett read a short statement apologizing for cancellation of the debate and explaining that Mr. Magruder would appear alone because "a person on the White House staff called and suggested" the change "in the interest of fairness."

"I think he is right when you add up the verbiage on the show." Mr. Cevett sald afterward, but pointed out that pro-SST guests appeared with Sen. Bayh and Sen. Proxmire on the previous

A spokesman for the Cavett show said an alde to White House communications director Herbert G. A man who said his name was John" telephoned the Los Angeles County sheriffs office homicide detail Friday, claiming to have witnessed the burial of Mr. Hughes at the Barker Ranch in Death Valley.

Mr. Hugbes, the attorney for Leslie Van Houten, disappeared last Thanksgiving. He was last reported seen in the Sespe Hot Springs area of California's Ventura County Nov. 28. Repeated searches found no trace of the bearded, 250-pound lawyer, and another attorney was appointed to defend Miss Van Houten.

Miss Van Houten and Manson were indicted along with Patricla Krenwinkel and Susan Atkins in connection with the 1969 Tate-La Bianca murders. ### House Clears 18-Year-Old Voting Age

Amendment Now Goes For State Approval

By Richard L. Lvons WASHINGTON, March 23 (WP).—The House today approved, 400-to-19, a proposed con-stitutional amendment lowering the voting age to 15 for all elec-tions and sent it off to the states for ratification.

The action set off a race as to whether the necessary 38 state legislatures would approve it in time for the 1972 elections and avoid the expense and confusion that ntherwise would be caused hy the present state of the law. Congress enacted a law last year that was intended to ac-complish this. But the Supreme Couort ruled, 5-to-4, that while the statute was valid for national elections of President and Congress, the voting age for state and local elections could be lowered only hy constitutional amendment or hy state action.

Only three states let 18-yearoids vote. There is not time for most of the rest to change their state constitutions by next year. So, as the law stands, most states would be required to conduct dual elections next year with added costs estimated at $5 million for New York City alone.

The only chance to provide uniform voting age by next year is by amending the federal constitution. This can be dona hy a two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress and approval hy legislatures of three-fourths of the 50 states.

The Senate approved the proposed amendment by a vote of 94-to-0, and it was sped through the House Judiciary Committee without public hearings. Many who had opposed 18-year-old voting last year supported the amendment in the interests of avoiding confusion and expense. Forty-eight of the 50 state legislatures plan sessions this year or next. Proposals to lower the voting age have been defeated by popular referendum in 19 states in recent years. But these actions came before the Supreme Court decision, and polls suggest that legislatures would be quicker to approve the proposal than the One argument against the amendment made by Reps, Robert Michel, R., Ill., and Edith Green, D., Ore., was that in small towns with large colleges the students might be able to outvote the taxpayers on local issues. Sponsors of the amendment said this could be avoided by state residence

Senators Score Any Inclusion Of Russia in Mideast Force

By Bernard D. Nossiter

WASHINGTON, March 23.— Sen. Henry M. Jackson charged the Nixon administration today with "courting disaster" by a proposal to include Russia in a Middle East peacekeeping force. The senator from Washington, frequently mentioned as the hawks candidate for the Demo-cratic presidential nomination, urged that U.S. policy aim at dislodging the Russians from the area. "The Soviet presence in Egypt," ba said, "is a direct threat

the U.S. Sixth Fleet and to our NATO allies." His address on the Senate floor touched off a 75-minute debate. Apart from Hubert Humphrey, D., Minn., who strongly endorsed Sen. Jackson's view, the closest anyone came to comment on the mixed peacekeeping force was Sen. Jacob Javits, R., N. Y., who said that "as long as the Russians are there, the threat to Israel is real."

The suggestion for a joint force to guarantee a peace was publicly raised by Secretary of State William P. Rogers at a press conference last week. Mr. Rogers also argued that holding a par-ticular piece of territory was no guarantee of security in a mod-ern world and this assertion drew the brunt of Sen. Javits's crit-

The Plight of the Cities

The citles of the United States find themselves in a strange and painful hind. The cost of their services to their people has climbed sharply. One reason for this is that they are all providing more services than hefore; another is that wage levels have increased sharply for municipal employees-reflecting not only the national trend, hut also the determination of government workers that their incomes shall not (as was costomary in the past) lag behind during periods of wage escalation. Then, goods purchased by the cities and the services they hire outside the municipal payroll share the general inflationary spiral. And, of course, welfare costs have mounted steadily.

These factors have all overloaded the city tax sources, and challenged those of the atates. So the citles have turned, with great urgency, to the federal government, which has the most efficient, as well as the most demanding, tax system around.

The normal way in which the federal government helps out states and cities financially is by specific programs, for specific purposes, under definite federal guidelines. This process can he too selactive—that is, concentrate on aubjects which do not meet the most direct needs of the urban areas: it can also be slow and cumbersome. Mr. Nixon sought to cut through the complicated mass of federal projects by revenue-sharing -allocating substantial sums to be used by the citics. They have responded very favorably, only complaining about the amounts

But Congress has its own point of view about sharing the revenues it appropriates. A number of congressmen, including the powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Wilhur Mills, believe that the legislature should not relinquish control of funds in this manner, but should alwaya stipulate how, and for what purposes. federal money should he used. This opposition is reflected by some liberals, who fear that local prejudice, or ineptitude, will lead to city funds being employed inequitably, or wastefully.

In other words, revenue-sharing is facing the same alignment of right and left that stymied Mr. Nixon's family-assistance plan in the last session. The counter-proposal-that the federal government take over ali welfare costs-has much to recommend it in theory. Welfare is a national, not a local. problem. Shifts of population, whether due to tachnological, economic or social causes, are very influential ti creating the welfare hurden, and certainly o not originate in the cities themselves, or jeven in individual

But if the federal gc ernment should take up tha whole cost of wilfare it could hardly be done overnight, especially if there is to be some major reform in welfare policles. such as the family-assistance plan. And meanwhile the citles need money-now. The need is urgent enough, and demanding enough, for the revenue-sharing plan to be regarded as an emergency measure. Neither congressional prerogative nor partisan dogma should be allowed to stand in the way.

No single gesture could earn North Vietnam and its allies as much goodwill and respect in the United States as a decision to implement fully the provisions of the Geneva convention in respect both to American military men held prisoner and to other Americans listed as missing in Indochina. Nearly 1,600 Americans are in these two categories-next Friday will mark the seventh anniversary of the capture of the first American still being held-and thair plight and the suffering of their families constitute a great national sadness. It would be a truly civilized act for Hanoi to honor the Geneva provisions for identification, inspection, correspondence, and the release of the seriously sick and wounded. All Geneva violations are, of course, inexcusable, but the other side's refusal to identify formally all the prisoners it holds is especially terrible, since it inflicts gratuitous anguish upon the families back home. In all, there is a good reason for every American to support this For Hanoi and the Viet Cong have offered "week of concern," as it has been designated by the President.

Efforts to affect the other side's performance on POWs and the missing, however, should not be allowed to obscure the possible further contributions to their welfare that might be made by their own government. For instance, President Nixon is asking North Vietnam to honor the Geneva convention, and to negotiate a pre-settlement prisoner exchange, even while he continues to bomh the North on an occasional basis and threatens to bomb more severely. He asks Hanoi for more information on

POWs, while characterizing Hanoi's attitude on the question as "barbaric" and while leaving unamended his secretary of state's characterization of the provision of a POW list by Hanoi last year as "contemptible." He seeks inspection of POW camps, while publicly retaining the option-claimed after the abortive Son Tay raid in November-to conduct raids on other camps where Americans might be held. If Mr. Nixon feels that larger political purposes prevent him from halting the bombing of North Vietnam, then could he not consider-for the sake of the POWs-softening his rhetoric on the issue and forswearing any more "Son Tays?"

In his "week of concern" proclamation, Mr. Nixon remarked on North Vietnam's "adamant refusal to consider negotiatious regarding the release of prisoners." This formulation is consistent with his own policy, which is to classify the POW issue as a humanitarian one separate from politics, but it is not consistent with the facts.

to negotiate the release of prisoners. The catch is, they have set as a condition that the United States first set a date for withdrawal from South Vietnam. This condition Mr. Nixon has refused to accept. Whether he will alter his policy when American troop levels are reduced even further next year is a question which is bound to interest all Americans who give first priority to the prisoners and the missing. In the meantime, the alternative which Mr. Nixon has suggested to the American people-heartfelt prayer-has much to commend it.

The News From Laos

The attempt by the South Vietnamese armed forces to gain control of the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos has failed. From the start the operation was in serious difficulties and it has ended in disaster. The hope that the successful clearing of the Viet Cong bases in Cambodia could be followed hy a permanent threat to the long supply lines which run down to them must now be abandoned.

The blow to President Thieu's military reputation will necessarily be a blow to his polltical status, for the one rests on the other. The main advantage to Hanol of the South Vietnamese failure in Laos is that it damages confidence in South Vietnam as well as in America. Hitherto, Mr. Nixon has been managing his own timetable and managing it with success. Now it may have been thrown badiy out of gear.

-From The Times (London). * * *

The U.S. military planners will he heavily blamed. Not for the first time, they have failed to judge the Communist fighting strength. They have failed to understand that the readiness to sacrifice men at an appalling rate is as much one of Hanoi's weapons as are the American bombers which have been battering Laos part of Saigon's weaponry. What is now questionable is not South Vietnam's fighting capahility but more its motivation and future morale. President Nixon will have to ask whether South Vietnam will ever be able to take over the sort of war the United States has been fighting, and whether Vietnamization is possible within the time scale he

-From The Guardian (London).

What is likely is that the whole credibility of Mr. Nixon's strategy will be called in question. Many Americans, perhans a majority, do not care whether Vietnamization is a sham or not: They just want to get out. But equally there are others, among them certainly Mr. Nixon himself, who care deeply about the effect on America's standing in the world of a shambles in Vletnam after American withdrawal. These Americans are likely to ask troubling questions following the Laos debacle.

By C. L. Sulzberger

BOGOTA. Colombia,—When the indomitable Bolivar first freed this great country from Spain it included (in addition to Colombia: Venezuela, Ecuador and Pacama. The famous Liberator settled into what is still the presidential palace, a jewel of 18th-century Spanish architec-ture that eveo now delightedly maiotains the bedroom from which Bolivar escaped would-be assassins while his mistress held them at bay.

It was only later, as a disappointed, embittered man, that Bolivar cootemplated the contioental uprising he had led and decided gloomily: (South) "Amerlea is ungovernable. He who serves the revolution ploughs the sea." Few today are so bleakly pessinustic, but the current president, Misael Pastrana Borrero, is aware of the potential explosiveness of new dangers building up in his perplexed land.

Colombia is notable for the highest birth-rate in South America, its lengthy two-ocean coastline, its occasional "rebel priests," a two-party political system and the excellence of its presidents since the last military dictatorship ended 14 years ago.

The Old Guard

Pastrana is typical of this excellence. Ao elegant former lawyer and diplomat who served as ambassador in Washington, he lives in the romantic Casa de Bolivar, protected by a mestizo guard with spiked, old-fashioned Prussian helmets, And the problems facing him are perhaps even more formidable than those which brought the Liberator to

"Every 22 years at the present growth rate we double cur population." the president says. This causes mounting difficulties In education, employment and even food. If the rate of increase continues It will be reflected more and more strongly in social repercussions.

"Moreover, the problem is complicated by a rapid change in distribution of nopulation. Swarms of people are moving into the big cities. Bogota, for example, doubles in size every ten years and there aren't nearly enough jobs to go around.

"The problem isn't simply hirth control an approach that is greatly complicated hy our religious and social traditions. A large percentage of the increase actually comes from illegitimate hirths and even the Communists oppose limiting population growth, which they claim is a U.S. device to exert control.

Pastrana points out that while Colombia's Catholic hierarchy is inclined to conservatism, "many priests realize they have ohligations hevond their sacerdotal role. The liberal ideas of Pope John XXIII have been strongly mirrored and you find priests preoccupled with social changes." By this Pastrana does not refer to the handful of extreme revolutionary priests like the late Father Camilo Torres, who left the clergy, joined a left-wing guer--illa band and was slain in battle. Second only to concern with the exploding population problem is United States is losing interest in attacking Latin America's social difficulties and has lowered the priority of aid to this area, whose stability depends on satisfying rising popular expectations.

"The greatest failure is in the field of trade." he says, "and above all in coffee, our principal export. What we receive from yon in ald-loans which, although on favorable terms, must be repald-we often lose in a single ear hy falling prices and deteriorating exchange rates. It would

On the Skids

By Tom Wicker

WASHINGTON.—Some South Vietnamese soldiers in tha retreat from Laos have been clinging to the landing skids of American helicopters. Soma hava heen falling to their deaths from these precarious perches, and in addition, "Wa just have to kick eome of them off," an American pi'ot has reported. "We have to think about ourselves, too. You just cannot lift this bird with 15 guys clinging to it."

Let that stand as the epitaph of the Laotian invasion, as it comes to an end so much less than glorious that even those who claim great things for it do not sound as if they have convinced elves. It is an appropriate epitaph, for if the invasion had any rational purpose at all it was, in the familiar incantatory words of the Nixon administration, "to save American lives." This is not a purpose any American can oppose, but how high a price must the rest of the world, particularly the Indochinese, pay to rescue Americans from a decada of hlunders? In the Laotian operation alone taking Salgon's figures at their dublous face value, more than 13 000 North Vietnamese and 1,031 South Vietnamers have been killed. In addition, 219 South Vietnamese are missing and 3.985 were wounded. When North Vietnamese wounded and missing are considered these figures suggest that perhaps 25,000 Indochinese military casualties have been suffered. (At least 61 American helicopter crewmen have been killed, 71 wounded and 24 are missing.)

The Missing Figures What were the civilian casualties produced hy this meat-chopper of an operation? It is a safa bet that no one can say, because no one in Washington or Saigon. any more than in Hanoi, bothers to make such estimates before launching big military strikes, and it is only weeks or months later that the refugees and the wounded and the dead begin to make their miserable marks. Thus, it was only last week that semiofficial figures were obtained from Sen. Kennedy's subcommittee on refugees: 125,000 to 150,000 civilian casualties from

000 to 35,000 civilians killed. These figures have not so far been disputed here or in Saigon. They do not include civilian casualties in Cambodia or Laos. They are included in the estimated 11 million civilian casualties, including 325,000 deaths, in South Vietnam since 1965, when the Artericans entered the war in

Domestic Backlash

No doubt this hard sell will No doubt this nard sell will cause Nixon domestic political problems. It is more important that once again the American command made the old familiar error of assuming that when it made a move, the other side would have no answer; in this case, the answer was at least partially a mass of heavy tanks. Moreover, since the President himself predicted that the North Vietnamese would fight and fight hard, it is also clear that the fighting shillitles of the South Visinamese Army were over-rated. All of that suggests a continuing underestimate of the power and determination of Hanol and the people it commands, a repeated overestimate of Salgon's cbllity, with or without American helo. so match the effort from the North. and another mistaken effort at a quick, winning hlow in a war that will not permit such a blow. .

It would probably be a mistake, nevertheless, to think that the Laotian repulse will lead Nixon to a significant change of policy. If he accedes to the request Gen. Abrams probably will make for a slowdown in the American withdrawal, the President will wreck his domestic political stance, and he is more likely than ever to think that pulling out at a faster rate would open both Salgon and any remaining American forces to disastrous attack,

Nor is there any reason to believe that the expulsion of the South Vietnamese from Laos signals anything but even wider and more destructiva aerial war-fare "to protect American lives." The heavy series of air attacks on North Vietnam at this time can be read in no other way than as Nixon's defiant message to Hanoi that he still has the will and means to carry on the fight. if only by air.

So the long, costly, shabby policy of withdrawing while propping up Saigen and ravaging Indochina probably will go da, without any new attempt to negotiate an end to the slaughter. It is a policy of kicking them off the skids so the American bird

Not so Common Cause. It is for everybody when it is soliciting members. But when it goes into actioo, as it now has in a tentative way, what is it for and what is it against? It is for ending the war in Vietnam now. It is against the SST, against the ABM, against the congressional seniority system and Senate fillbuster rules, for "drastic reduction" in defense spending, and for limiting campaign exnenditures.

One may agree or disagree that these are common causeshelieved in by all good citizens with $15. There is much to be said for the kind of congressional reforms advocated by Gardner's organization. But there are a few arguments against them, too, Actually, Congress started reforming its seniority practices on its own initiative at the start of its current session, before Common Cause was really functioniog. Since then the Senate has refused to modify its fillbuster rules. Gardner's suit to enjoin the major parties from violating legal limits on campaign expenditures is still pending.

Whether Congress will provide the funds needed for further development of the SST is still uncertain. The aerospace in-dustry is lobbying for it, arguing that the United States must catch up with the Soviet Union and the British-French partner-ship, already wall ahead in the Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird has just asked Congress for a modest increase in ABM installations, warning that the Russians will get too far ahead in nuclear weaponry, destroying the present balance, unless more defense missiles ara added to the U.S. system or unless thesa weapons are limited by agreement. ### Back to Vietnam

As for getting ont of the war in Vietnam now—or by the end of this year—the argument has been going on for a long time and is familiar to almost everyone. Hera Common Cause may well speak, if not for everyone, at least for a majority. The polls say it does. But President Nixon thinks the country can be persuaded to tolerate a flexible plan for withdrawal Anyway, Gardner's recently acquired habit of speaking for the American people most if not all-is less presumptuous in this area than in others. Where public opinion settles down will depend in large neasure on the outcome of the battles now being fought in Laos. The point is that Common Cause's causes are not what everybody considers to be in the public interest—not even every-body who has contributed $15. It is in danger of being regarded as a sort of suxiliary of the left. wing of the Democratic party, if its causes are the causes of Sen. George McGovern, Sen. Harold

Henry Jackson, who refuses to join tha chorus.

Judged by the positions it has taken, it is hard to detect any great difference right now between Common Cause and Americans for Democratic Action, long the Democratic party's ally on the liberal flank. There - the similarity ends, however. ADA is democratically run. Its membership decides its positions on the issues after lengthy and often hot debate, whereas Gardner seems to speak for Common Cause without let or hindrance. He has a board and advisers but is now, to all intents and pur-poses, Common Cause itself.

Gardner quit the Johnson cabinet because of a dispute with the President over domestic policy, though it was assumed at the time that his real distress was over the war, an assumption he neither discouraged nor encouraged. His emphasis since Common Cause became operational has been against the war. He has surrounded himself with able veterans of that cause, among them Morton Halperin and Peter Edelman. Some of Gardner's lesser associates speculate that he has been "radicalized" by his determination to "live down" his association with LBJ.

Jack Conway, a close associate of the late Walter Reuther, will join the Common Causa staff soon. Ha is knowing and experienced in the ways of congressional and presidential poli-tics. To some, his acquisition by Gardner means that the organination wants to shed some of the soft fuzz of idealism for a hard shell of third-force politics that will command respect from Congress, candidates and party leaders. UAW President Sees Heath About Ford's Remarks

LONDON, March 23 (UPI). Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers of America, met Prime Minister Edward Heath today and expressed concern at the growing power of multi-national firms such as the Ford Motor Co.

We had a very pleasant discussion." Mr. Woodcock told newsmen after bis one-bour meet-ing with Mr. Heath. "We cxpressed our concern at the growing power-the unrestrained powof multi-national companies." Mr. Woodcock was joined by two British labor union leaders. Jack Jones of the Transport and General Workers' Union and Hugh Scanlon of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, in the meeting with Mr. Heatb.

The three union chiefs said earlier that they requested the meeting in order to put forth their own views regarding re-marks made by Henry Ford 2d in his talks with Mr. Heath earlier this month. Mr. Ford sald then that his company would make no new investments in Britain because of the nation's labor problems, including an eight-week strike which has close! all British Ford plants.

Tchaikovsky-Only on Sundays

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON - You see that ad among the concert announcements in the Saturday and Sunday papers calling your attention to a Tchaikovsky program Sunday night at the Royal Albert Hall. And you ask yourself: "Didn't they give that concert last week?"

They probably did. Or maybe it was the week before last. And they'll give it again next week, or maybe the week after next. Actually, it is not played quite so often as it seems-about 15 Sunday nights a year.

It's not just that the program is all-Tebaikovsky. It's pretty much the same Tchaikorsky—the Piano Concerto No. 1: the "Nutcracker Suite"; selections from "Swan Lake" or "Sleeping Beauty," or both; possibly the "Marche Slave," and, inevitably, the "1812 Overture," reinforced by ooc of the regimental bands and "cannon and mortar effects."

Victor Hochhauser, the ingenious impresario of these concerts—also known as the Sol Hurok of London, because it is he who brings the great Soviet artists to Great Britain-has two other programs upon which he can rely to fill the Albert Hall's 6,000 seats wheo Tchaikovsky is given a night off.

The Strausses

One is a Viennese program, devoted largely to all the Strausses except Richard, and leading, mcxorably to the "Blue Danube Waltz." Another, more variable, but none the less reliable, is put together from such affectionately treasured chestnuts as Dvorak's "New World Symphony"; the Grieg Piano Coocerto or Rachmaninoff's Concerto in C minor: Rimsky-Korsakov's "Scheherazade"; Dukas's "The Sorcerer's Apprentice"; Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture and Ravel's "Bolero." From time to time he will bring in the Vienna Choir Boys.

All this is fare rarely offered by the five London orchestras that hold forth most nights of the week in the Royal Festival Hall across the Thames on the South Bank. They will play a Tchaikovsky symphony from time to time, but oot the ballet suites, and least of all the "1812 Overture." They will play any other Dvorak symphony than the "New World," and if they play Ravel, it will not be the "Bolero."

Which is one of the reasons why Hochhauser's are among the few orchestra concerts given lu Londoo without some sort of subsidy. He is on his own: and be gets away with it, as he has been doing for 25 years, by giving the public-or, at least a public-what it likes best, and what a provincial orchestra, usually the Birmingham Symphooy, cao play decently with only one rehearsal. His soloists are almost always young and relatively unknown, Several of Great Britain's leading pianists got their start playing the Grieg, the Tchaikovsky or the Rachmaninoff at these con-

It is tempting to assume that Hochhauser has solved the problem of making symphony concerts a paying proposition by "giving the public what it wants." In a way, he has. But, as he hastens to tell you, "It's only on Sunday." And it's probably only at the Albert Hall. This was demonstrated just a few weeks ago when the London Symphocy Orchestra offered a similar Tchaiko'sky program at the Royal Festival Hall on a Thursday with John Browning playing the Piano Coocerto. The Royal Festival Hall seats only 3,000, and it was not s out. Hochhauser, the preceding Sunday, had sold out the Albert Hall, with a less famous piaolat than Browniog playing the coocerto.

What it boils down to is that in Loodon, more than most citles, it is foolish to talk about "the public." London has many publics, and the public to which Hochhauser addresses himself so successfully is one which will pay moderate prices to enjoy what it innocently conceives to be good music. He estimates it at about 250,000, which is why he can repeat essentially identical programs so often. He does it not only without any assistance from the Arts Council, but also without any encouragement from the critics. The Sunday night concerts are almost never covered, which is tough not on Hochhauser, who doesn't need the coverage, but on his young soloists, who do. One wooders, in the end, whether the critics. with their abhorrence of what so many people like, and by inhibiting the big London orchestras in their choice of repertoire, may not bear some responsibility for scaring 250,000 music-lovers away from the South Bank and into the welcoming embrace of P.I. Tchaikovsky and Victor Hoch-

Brecht's Theater in Paris

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS, March 23.-The Berliner Ensemble will be playing at the Theatre Gerard Philipe in the suburb of Saint-Denis through April 4 and should not be missed by any serious theater-

The ensemble ranks with the Comédie-Française, tha Abbey of Dublin and the Moscow Art Theater as one of the most distinctive acting companies in the world. The theater was founded in East Berlin by Bertolt Brecht in 1949. and it is devoted exclusively to the production of Brecht's plays and adaptations designed by the dramatist, whose theatrical con-cepts are widely imitated. The ensemble selected "Die

Tage der Kommune" (Commune

Days1 as the first of three plays to be performed here. The choice is appropriate because it marks the centenary of the Paris Commune, which fell after a few months in power in May, 1871. As with many Brecht plays, this one was inspired by another. Its source is "The Defeat." a drama on the same subject by the Norwegian Nordahl Grieg. Brecht sought to correct Grieg's tragedy of the Commune's downfall by explaining the fatal mistakes of lts leaders: Viewed in retrospect the Communards, hopelessly out-

stand and die. Official Scruples numbered, had no choice but to Brecht tells the story of a group of working-class inhabitants of a Montmartre street with the activ-ltics of the Paris City Council in the background. The simple faith and staunch courage of the people are contrasted with the scruples of the officials who in their impose discipline upon their forces because of their lingering anti-militarism. There are carlcatures of Thiers and Bismarck conferring. The humble Mont-martre folk are shot down on the barricades as Paris goes up in flames, a band of elegant ladies and gentlemen applauding the spectacle from afar—on stands erected in the balcony.

To underscore the lesson of the defeat, the company forms before the curtain defiantly to sing a militant number by Hant Eisler, Eine oder Keine, Alles oder Nichts.

Brecht termed his form of presentation "Epic Theater" and it contains -reflections of the methods of Meyerhold and Pis-cator, the Oriental stage of masks and ritual, the silent flim -with scenes introduced by a descriptive subtitle—and satirical cabaret (in which he took part as a minstrel in his Munich days in the early 1920s: It is a bold attempt at total theater with drama, melodrama, historic chronicle. elowalng music and revue tactics all playing parts.

The performance of "Dic Tage der Kommune," obeying the Brecht commands, is an ensemble creation. There flashes of expert characterization, both in the passages depicting the Montmartre population and in the cartooning of Thiers and Bismarck, but It is production more notable for its skilled drilling and teamwork than for its individual contributions or emotional impact. The form of the enterprise, now familiar bas become somewhat dehydrated under its own strict conventions. The Moscow Art Theater after Stanislavsky has become a museum. The morality play "Jedermann" in the Salzburg Domplatz today is but a carbon copy of the spectacle staged by Max Reinhardt in the 1930s. For that matter, consider "The Ziegfeld Follies" after Ziegfeld's demise. The directorial genius of Brecht is solemnly honored rather than duplicated in the production of 'Die Tage der Kommune," one feels, remembering the vivid life the touch of the master brought "Mother Courage," "The Caucasian Chalk Circle" and "Galileo" when seen at the Théatre des Nations festivals some years ago.

The Brechtian anti-naturalistic theory of "alienation"—that the actor must never seek to be his role but maintain a studied distance from it—is an ad-ditional difficulty in the "Kommune" production here because the spectators, most of whom do not understand German, are already cut off from the text and can only respond to what they see, despite the translated

"Die Tage der Kommune" is exercise in the recommended Brechtian style of doctrinaire liberalism hesitate to use violence, restrain the masses from marching on Versailles, leave the coffers of the Bank of France untouched and neglect to impose discipline upon their forces because of their linesters. Gérard Philipe the Berliner Ensemble is offering two other Brecht plays: "The Mother." 2 free adaptation of the Gorky novel, and "The Bread Shop." a work that its author left unfinished and has not been prosented here before.

Although the Dublin theater festival came to an official end on Sunday, several productions will continue performances dur-ing the next few weeks, among them. Hugh Leonard's The Patrick Pearse Motei' (at the Olympia !- it has, in fact, gained the attention of West End scouts and may eventually be seen in London. Basically it is a Palais-Royal bedroom farce with brogue undertones. It concerns intend-ed and suspected adultery on the part of the wives of two motel-building tycoons. The comedy takes place—in part—in one of their Hiltonesque hostels, the chambers of which are hung with the imposing portraits of Irish patriots.

It sparkles with a merry humor May Chuskey, floating about in formless attire as a jealousity guarded spouse, is a marvel of hilarity. There is helpfu! work by Godfrey Quigle as her eversuspicious mate; by Rosadcen Linchan and Frank Kelly as the complementary couple; by John Gregson as a TV idol, a timorous Don Juan; by Angela Vale as the efficiency expert come from England: and by Derry Power as a lost leader of 1916 become abused night watchman.

Two other continuing events should please those fascinated by the literature of the Irish renaissance. The first is the performance of Synge's "Playboy of the Western World" at the little Lantern Theatre in Merrion Square, and the second is Allan McClelland's reading of two stories from "Celibates," accompanied by an account of their much-feared author, George Moore, whose sharp tongue and eloquent pen terrorized Edwardian Dublin.

Mary Nanning's "Ah, Well. It Won't Be Long Now!" (done at the Olympia during the festival's first week) was performed by an excellent cast which included Milo O'Shea (remembered for his Bloom in the "Ulysses" movies, Zoe Wanamaker (daughter of the American actor Sam Wanamaker), and O.Z. ### Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, March 23.-This is how critics rate new productions on and Off-Broad-

"The Philauthropist," a comedy Christopher Hampton at Broadway's Barrymore Theater. got enthusiastic reviews from seven critics, negative ones, from three. Clive Barnes of The New York Times: "The Philanthropist" is a good, funny, literate and literary play. Mr. Hampton writes dialogue that has the bright artificiality of Wilde and yet, also like Wilde, with just suff!cient humanity in it to remain bearable. This is high comedy, even if some of the lines could find their bedfellows in low farce. It is a good evening of high-class theatrical hl-jinks that says more than might be seen on the _urface." Associated Press critic William Glover made a different assessment: "A bland Britisb foolishment...

"The Fabulous Miss Marie," a play by Ed Bullins, the fourth in his projected cycle of 20 plays, was wall received. Mel Gussow in The Times: "Through that characters in Marie's place, Bullins conveys a life style—in this case that of middle-class blacks in Los Angeles, who have achievcd a plateau of success with a certain loss of drive and direction. Before the breed vanishes, Bullins captures it completely, as if for a time cansule. These works progressing toward something cumulative: a compos-ite, yet highly iodlyidualized. portrait of black America. As a playwright. Mr. Bullins holds himself slightly off-center. This gives his work a clearly observed objectivity, which considering the humorous and irenic—may be a good thing. The director is Robert Macbeth.

"The Dream of Monkey Moun-tain," the Negro Ensemble Company production of a play by Derek Walcott at the Off-Broadway St. Marks Playhouse, was approved by most critics. Clive Barnes reported for the The Times: "The Dream on Monkey Mountain, is a beantiful, bewilder ing play by a post. Mr. Walcott, a black Trinidadian, rightly sees the English language as one of his ethnic inberitances, and he fell in love with it the way few people can. The play is a fantasy. An old man is thrown in jail for drunkenness. The play is remembrances of his past and dreams of his future. But beyond the picaresque there lies some d'm poetic allegory about blackness and colonialism." Michael A. Schulth directed, Roscoe Lee Browne plays the prophet.

"Father's Day." Ollver Hailey's comedy of New York mores, got one good and one negative review. AP drama critic William Glover: "Father's Day, gives divorce American style a funny. wistful going over. There's so nuch wit, sharp and sometimes needlessly crude, in this account of three brief reunions that the play's more serious quality might be overlooked. Gags coat genuine emotional pangs, and within the clever prattle can be detected a sigh, perhaps for lost innocence. It is a constantly fascinating context." Times mun Olive Barnes was less impressed: "To give credit to Mr. Halley, this is a seriously intended example of a peculiarly difficult genre. If only his characters had been a little more interesting, or spoke less like cartoon captions or tape recordings, the evening would have had more. But, for me at least, Mr. Hailey offered no insights on marriage or divorce." Donald Moffat directed play about American military training, got a mixed report from Clive Barnes in The Times: "I instinctively felt that the pleture it drew was unfair and exaggerated. Americans just do not behave with the calculated callousness and cruelty of Tabori's drill instructors. Still this play stirs mease in the conscience. Whether it would convert the unconverted I don't know. Like quite a lot of expressly political theater, it does have a certam self-right-eousness about it, and it trades slogans rather than dialectic. It is the kind of play calculated to make doves pur rather than hawks change direction." Martin Fried staged the production.

Seen in that light, Lockheed bargainers allegedly are saying, Rolls should be content with a far lower price increase than it has asked. It would be a modest increase that would not give Rolls a profit on the first run of orders but would assure it a tidy one when "afterorders," new orders, spares and replacements over the years are taken into account. That assumes the L-1011 will be a success.

Sources indicate that Lockheed cannot tolerate too big an increase in unit engine cost, even if present customers share it with the company, as uncommitted airlines logically would go for the competing DC-10, and even some of the present L-1011 customers might decide that they would prefer the less costly plane when

Greater future income can be the goal of a $5,000 portfolio placed under management now

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recognized the supervision of the supervision of the supervision for people who recognized the supervision of the supervision of nize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year. For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. O-28

The Dallas Aces showed their world championship form in winning the Vanderbilt Cup for the first time in Atlanta last weekend. Bill Eisenberg, Bob Goldman, Bob Hamman, Jim Jacoby, Mike Lawrence and Bob Wolff, under the nonplaying captaincy of Ira Corn, won the final match against strong opposition by 156 international match points, thus becoming strong favorites to represent the United States in the 1972 world team

Olympiad. The Aces' North-South victims had a slight attack of optimism in bidding the diagramed deal. After South had opened one diamond, his partner's three notrump response showed the equivalent of a one no-trump opening bid, so the partnership was clearly in the slam zone.

North's second bid of five clubs was a cue-bid, and South's five no-trump asked about diamond honors. Six diamonds showed one top honor in the partnership style, and South took the plunge into the grand slam.

The diamond ten was led, and the ace won in the closed hand. Dummy was entered with a trump lead to the king, and a heart was discarded on the club ace. The fate of the contract now hinged on the spade queen, which was in a position to be trapped by a simple finesse, but as it turned out it was South who was trapped. A club was ruffed, and the last trump was drawn. Eisenberg, as West, had nonchalantly discarded the club nine and the spade five on the second and third rounds of trumps. The spade discard suggested to South that the spade queen was on his right, so after cashing two rounds spade king. When the ten fell from West, he thought he had judged correctly. He ran the jack, and was hurt when West produced the queen.

In the replay, Jacoby and Wolff were content to bid six diamonds, a contract that is a near certainty. The Aces gain-ed 16 international match points. They would have lost 13 if the grand slam had succeeded. NORTH

DIARY OF A CENTURY

By Jacques Henri Lartique. Edited by Richard Avedon. Viking. 256 pp. Illustrated. $27.50. Reviewed by Jean Stafford

When Jacques Henri Lartique was 7 years old in 1901, his father, an early photography buff, gave him his first camera and for the next 70 years he took pictures of everything he loved. What he found lovable was beautiful or ludicrous or magical or blessed, and the selection Richard Avedon has made for Diary of a Century" will captivate any beholder who does not feel dnty-bound to scrutinize the seamy side of life. From the time he was a little boy, he kept an uncomplicated diary, excerpts of which illuminate the photographs; he headed each entry with a sketch of the sun or a cloud and with the code letters "T. B." or "B." or "T. T. B." which stood for "três beau," "beau,", "très, très beau," for in his joyous world it rarely rained. And he included drawings of the things and people he had photographed that day for, early on, when the art was in its infancy and developing processes had not been perfected. pictures often did not come out —and he could not bear to lose the immediacy of his delight. In summer holidays he went with his parents, whom be adored ("Papa: he is like our Good Lord [maybe it is He in disguise?]"), and his brother and their entourage to their Château Rousat in southeast France, where cousins and uncles and friends came to join them in unceasing sport. At the beginning of the record of his life, too young to play with the older boys, Jacques watched them with awe as "they played marvelous games, unique in the world. They constructed a bicycle the other day, and they also built. a fantastic merry-go-round for which they used some of the beams of a house that is being built and added a few ornaments from Mama's and Papa's living TOOM. When he was not a spectator or a partner in all this gambling. he was in his "secret garden," drawing and smelling the flowers. They went, this lark-mad family, to car races in Auvergne and Dieppe, to the Aviette bicycle races at the Buffalo track in Paris to horse races at Longchamp; they went to St. Moritz to ski and toboggan and ice skate and to clown. They went to beaches. Papa, who was a rich banker, was ruled by the pleasure principle and his disciples devoutly learned and followed his creed.

When Jacques was still a child, he fell in love with women and, after the summer frolics back in Paris, he drew women instead of auto cars and trees-" . . . everything about them fascinates me-their dresses, their scent, the way they walk, the makeup on their faces, their hands full of rings and, above all, their hats," His photographs of elegant clotheshorses from the turn of the century through the 1960s are a comprehensive pictorial history or fashion.

The three or four pictures of World War I are not at all disnk: one shows M very dapper uniform beside a biplane, another is a glimpse of tea-dancing on leave; a dancer on an improvised stage is entertaining at a hospital and then, as quick as a wink, there are scenes of the celebration of the Armistice.

After the war he married Bibi Messager, the daughter of the composer and director of the Opera André Messager, and his marriage was as much fun as marriage was as much run as watching an aviator doing stunts. Bible was the most beautiful girl alive and in the enchanted Twenties they danced. # NFL Watches Haywood-NBA Case

By Murray Chass

PALM BEACH, Fig., March 23 (NYT) .- While girls in the briefest of bikinis sunned themselves on the beach outside. Pete Rozelle sat dressed in a business suft in a room at the expensive Breakers Hotel yesterday and discussed the adverse effect the Spencer Haywood case could have on pro

"It could be a problem for us," the commissioner acknowledged as the annual spring meeting of National Football League owners began, "In today's climate, any litigation affecting any phase of sports could rub off on other sports. If it does become a problem, we'll just have to find a way out."

Rozelle said the owners hadn't discussed the Haywood case, which currently is in the United States District Court in Los Angeles, but it is known that the NFL's lawyers are following the situation. Haywood is the basketball star who is testing the National Baskethall Association's rule that teams cannot sign a player until his college class has graduated. Haywood signed with the Denver Rockets of the American Basketball Association after his sophomore year at the University of Detroit, Then, after one season, he jumped to the Seattle Supersonics of the NBA.

Four-Year Rule Questioned In recently granting Haywood a temporary injunction allowing him to play in the NBA, a federal judge ruled that the league's four-year rule violated a player's rights.

If the ruling is upheld, it most likely will throw out the Mau's four-year mile as well. Rozelle, though is Skeptical that the rule will be wiped out. "I just can't feel that something like that would hold up," the commissioner said. "I can't believe a practice that is for the protection of the colleges

Less Talking Requested

Elsewhere in the hotel, the owners listened to various committee reports. Later, they also heard some recommendations from Rozelle, one saking the owners that they and their employees refrain from public comment on certain topics.

The commissioner said ba particularly frowned upon public feuding, such as that between Dan Reeves, the owner of the Los Angeles Rams, and George Allen, his former coach who now is coach of the Washington Redskins.

"I indicated to both of them that they had given me a problem and I advised them I thought they should cease their comments, and they have," the commissioner said. "Whatever action might be taken against them, if any, I can't say."

The main item on the agenda at the meeting is the selection of a site for next season's Super Bowl. Seven groups from six cities-Miami, New Orleans, Dallas, Los Angeles, Houston and Jackson-ville, Fla—are bidding for the game, Represen-tatives of the groups make their presentations to the owners today. Miami, which has had the game three of the five years it has been played, and Dallas are the leading contenders.

Rozelle said he favored moving the game around, could be legally ruled invalid. If it would be, of although not necessarily each year, (AP).—Sweden maintained its perfect record in the 1971 world ice hockey championships today, effortlessly disposing of West Germany, 7-2, for its third consecutive victory.

The Swedes and Russians are now tied for first in the standings, both with six points from three games, although the Soviet squad has a superior goal average.

The two nations clash for the first time in the last game of the first round Friday night before the six competing nations move on to Geneva for the final round. In the second game, the United States suffered its third straight loss, bowing to Finland, 74, despite a two-goal charge by American Gary Gambucci in the second period.

After winning its opening con-test by upsetting Czechoslovakia, the U.S. team has lost to Sweden. Russis, and now to Finland, which moved into third place in the stauding with four points from three games.

U.S. coach Murray Williamson had expected to win tonight's crucial game against Finland's "Blue Lions." But sloppy defensive play in the first period gave the Finns a 2-0 lead they never gave up.

The Americans came back with a three-goal rally in the second frame, center Gambucci, 24, of Hibbing, Minn., getting two goals within the span of 28 seconds and defenseman Jim McElmury, 21, of St. Paul, Minn., getting another on a sizzling blue line shot.

game and won the last period.

The United States had five players with injuries but they all saw action tonight. Williamson commented: "Emotionally and mentally, our boys are still full of spirit. But they have lost their physical condition following injuries and the tough game last night (against the Russians). But the American team will still produce good performances in tha next six matches. All we need is a little rest and recoveries from injuries. We still have a few upsets in our bag and we haven't

"This is your Red Smith town," Weaver told him, "and they're your bugs. Do you think they follow me around from Baltimore?" "Don't worry about 'em," a visitor said. "As a matter of fact, I understand you have no worries at all Haven't had an unsolved problem since 1968."

"That's right." Weaver said. "Just get 'em in shape and let's start the season. It's a great game." His round face was blissful. Earl Weaver is a naturally cheerful man and on account of people named Brooks Robinson and Dave McNally and Mike Cuellar and Frank Robinson and Jim Palmer and Boog Powell and Mark Belanger, he tends to twinkle a good deal.

The Four-Man Ootfield

"If you don't bave starting pitchers or can't find hitters, It can be tough," he said. "But it's "Speaking of problems," a man said, "how do you propose to keep four outfielders happy?" (The Orioles bave had Merv Retenmund as a spare, and 27-yearolds who lead the team with a batting average of 322 can chafe in the role of substitute.) "Rettenmund got to bat almost 400 times as the fourth outfielder last year," Weaver said. "He's a regular. You start with four outfielders but you know they're not all going to have a good year. Somebody usually eliminates himself as a regular. Or you have minor injuries-or major ones like Blair who was out for a month lest year.

"Frank needs a little more rest every year, And suppose some-thing happened to Brooks or Boog, God forbid. If Boog was out we'd probably play Frank at first. If Brooks couldn't play, Don Buford could come in to play third—he was an infielder with the White Sox—and that would make room for the fourth outfielder.

Mark of Class

Somebody said something about close games, and the manager beamed. He said the Orioles had 55 games decided by one run last year, and won 40 of them.

"The mark of a good team," a man said. "Anybody can win or lose 10-4, but it's that little touch of class that decides the close

Weaver nodded. "You can't turn a 10-4 game around," he said.

"You either win or lose it, But you can turn a one-run game arcund with a single good play. Like getting the runner over to third base with nobody out. This team has been very successful at

"I try to beat the double play by shifting Frank and Boog in the batting order," he said, "They can both hit the ball awful hard on the ground. If the other pitcher is a guy Frank might find to handle, then bat Boog shead can hit to the opposite field and move him around. The cherubic features were dreamy, "Whenever we talk to the Yankees," the manager said, "they mention Boog and we men-tion Stottlemyre and Peterson. When it comes to making deals, Houk's got no more authority then I do, and I haven't got any." "The Yankees mentioned Boog?" a guy said. "All I've read was that you were going to give Frank tough, I might bat him ahead of Boog. If it's a gny Frank figures Boog was going to New York.' to the Yankees. I didn't know "Boog ain't going anywhere," of him so if Boog gets on, Frank Farl Weaver said.

Baker basebull players are. Between us. diacy. I am a pushover for a baseball player. But football players-ugh! They smell of dead leaves.

March 10-Back in Washington tonight, where I had great sport making the tom cats your louder than the wet-cement-colored peop'e have heard them in months. Slept under a rose bush and left it swollen with red pimples. Old winter was furious. He's been here so long that. Ilke everybody else in this city, he smells of H-

March 13-If I haven't been very faithful to you lately, diary, it's because I have been working my resy-tipping fingers to the bone, getting the dawn up earller every day and keeping a good wind going to blow the cobwebs out of these cement-colored

March 17-A furious quarrel teday with the sun. He says he will not-absolutely will not-spend another 12-hour day shining on Washington, as he cannot stand the smell which is given off in this vicinity, but especially from Baltlinore. He threatens to go back south to Brazil, I finally had to scare him. I told him if he offended the government of this country. I would assume he had fallen to Communisar and send an army to save him.

March 19-Up before dawn this morning putting Greenhaze in treetops. Afterward, started a number of adolescent boys think-Ing about ways to get rid of their pimples, Made a cab driver smile and started construction workers whistling at women pedestrians. March 20-Daffodils, daffodils, daffodils! Every year I'm supposed to get those lary yellow oaf-

And what for? So ey will remind these wet-rement-colored people of life! All last night I slayed up talking those datfodils open in Rock Creek Park, like Pat O'Brien in "Knute Rockae —All American." "I want you dalfodils to open up out there and make a bureaucrat smile." That's what I told them. I'm too embarrassed even to tell you, diary, the story I told them about the daffodil named the Gippec. But it had them weening. Anyhow, after working all night, I got a few opened and sat on a brand new tulip leaf to eavesdrop on the first cement-colored man who went by. He was with a girl "Look at the daffodils." she said, "Daffodils!" the man cried with a soh of frustration.

"Gwendolyn, why don't you ever talk to me about the gross national product?" March 21-Today was the big day for these clods who live by statistics and timetables. This was the day I officially arrived. How terrible having to live among people who believe in chacts! I was so mad yesterday about it that I tried to blow off all their roofs and then stalked out of town last night after waking up old winter and telling him he was relcome to keep the place. Well, wouldn't you know it? At dawn the poor old sun was coming up over the vicinity holding his nose and I was going south fast when I noticed that all my birds were cone. I'd left them all back in Washington, I felt so terrible. "I'm going back." I told the northwest wind. There is more to Washington than those gross national product lovers. The birds need me. So here I am, officially arrived, after already growing old in this town. Well, I understand they will even believe their own body count here if it is officially charted.

March 22-Today I persuaded a man who has been officially certified secure by the United States government to raise his eves from a piece of paper covered with official U.S. facts, and look out a window at a passing woman, and smile. When he caught himself, he immediately proposed to report himself to the official U.S. officials. But guess what, dlary! I made him change

A Scrap of Parchment And a Platonic Dialogue

By Jon Nordheimer

ADDINIFRIGATION DISTRIBUTO DE PARTO DE LO PROPERTO DE LA PROPERTO DE PARTO DE PARTO DE LA PARTO DE LA PARTO DE

NEW YORK (NYT).-A taltered scrap of ancient parchment conlaining several lines of a dialogue of Plato has been found by a Duke University professor who believes it is a "missing link" in the evolution of the book in Western literature.

The parchment, barely three inches square, may be ooc of the oldest literary bridges between the papyrus scrolls of the classical world and the crude books that served civilization through the Middle Ages down to the invention of the printing press.

In a way, books of parenment preserved for modern man the great literature of the Greek and Roman periods. They served as a lifeboat that rescued classical literature from death in the tumult and neglect of the Dark Ages. Wocks writtee on papyrus—the paper-like material made from reeds grown along the banks of the Nile—have all but vanished, crumbled into dust over 20 centuries. Dr. William H. Willis, professor of Greek at Duke and president of the American Society of Papyrologists, a scholarly group concerned with the investigation of ancient writings, revealed his findings at a seminar on classical civilization at the Faculty Club at Columbia University Among the statements he made were these:

• The fragment is the earliest evidence of Plato on parchment. The It is the encliest Plato in codex rearly book! form, It is the first example of Roman uncial writing is forerunner of modern capital letters, on parchment. • It is the earliest ancestor of the great uncial codice; of the Dr. Willis, in an interview at Duke, said he believed that his discovery represented a milestone in paleography, the study of ancient He sald he believed his discovery dated to the second century-about AD 130. If this is accepted by other scholars as authentic, he said, it could be used to test the age of other writings.

Chemical tests for age, such as the carbon-14 technique, have little value in paleography because the margin for error encompasses several centuries, Dr. Willis explained. He sald the "Duke Plato" had already shed doubt on the fourthcentury date that art historians and archaeologists have assigned to the "Ambrosian Iliad." recognized as the finest literary work yet recovered from the ancient world. Dr. Willis contended that the aimilarities in lettering found in both works suggested that the "Ambrosian Iliad" was about two centuries older than it was previously thought to he. Dr. Willis said that in 1969 he purchased a mixed lot of broken fragments of papyrus from a dealer in the Middle East. At the bottom of the pile he found a single scrap of parchment that he disregarded at first because it was a palimpsest-the ink of the original text had been expunged and the parchment used again.

Back at Duke however, a study of the scrap under ultraviolet light made visible the lines of the original work by tracing the grooves etched by the writer's pen on both sides of the skin. After further investigation he identified the lines as belonging to a dialogue from Plato 429-347 BC; called the "Parmenides." "It's actually a tedious little philosophical discourse," he said, "and as it turned out the words are identical to the oldest parchment manuscripts we had from the ninth century. It was the close examination of the lettering, however, that convinced Dr. Willis that the parchment was a rarity. The Roman uucial lettering was identical with the hand used for the most sumptuous papyrus scrolls of the late first century and second century, he said, placing it at the beginning of the thousand-year tradition of parchment manuscripts.

The Plato fragment found by Dr. William H. Willis.

While his findings have yet lo be thoroughly examined and debated by the academic world, the initial reaction of some experts in the field supports Dr. Wills's conclusions.

"This fragment of Plato is extremely important for the history paleography and the dating of other literary documents," said Alan E. Samuel, professor of Greek and Roman history at the University of Toronto.

Papyrus was a durable and obundant tool of the Greco-Roman world until the Arob conquest of Egypt (AD 639-642) cut off the supply, and most writing was restricted to parchment, the dried skins of animals. The moist earth of Europe and Asia long ago destroyed the bulk of the works committed to papyrus, but fragments of it buried in ancient Greek settlements and arid Egypt have survived.

Dr. Willis estimated that there were about 100,000 pieces of papyrus in museum and university collections in Europe and North America, ranging from whole scrolls to torn and broken fragments. The preparation and treatment of paperus before it can be studied is so painstaking, however, that fewer than one-fifth of this number have been examined and identified over the last century, he Most of the finds have yielded nothing more than mundane documents of the Greek outposts in Egypt-such things as sales contracts, accident reports and receipts-which possess historical and anthropological value but contribute little to the world's treasure of literature. Experts believe that only 3 percent of ancient Greek literature survived the Middle Ages, Dr. Willis said, and there is no guarantee that only the best survived through centuries of recordings by scribes attuned to a secular age. For example, only seven plays by Sophocles are extant, but there is evidence that he wrote more than 120-43 of which were awarded first prize in drama contests in Athens.

It is believed that the oldest existing codex of parchment is the "De Bellis Macedonicis." which was written in Latin about AD 90 and is now in a London collection.
